Subject: Microsoft Settlement

To whom it may concern,

The proposed Microsoft settlement does too little to rein in the specific anti-competitive behaviors which Microsoft has engaged in in the past, and does not significantly erode the existing barriers to entry which Microsoft's software licences and end-user agreements impose on the developers and users who create and/or use software intended to run on PCs, whether or not those PCs are running a Microsoft operating system. The analysis at <http://www.kegel.com/remedy> outlines some of the more obvious problems and proposes solutions; I urge you to consider it in formulating a better, truly effective, settlement.
